

Projects: Conversation

11/30/2017

In the past few weeks, we invited people from the community to come and speak with us. Today, we would like to concentrate on our own respective areas of interest. Towards this end, we propose a series of interviews, where course participants interview each other. We propose the following format:

1. We randomly paired interviewer and interviewee.
2. In today's class, we will generate questions. These may be questions you have about the course itself, presentations, or about tangential concerns from the past few weeks. You may or may not use the generated questions in your respective interviews.
3. In the coming week or two, each interviewer is expected to interview their interviewee. No class is scheduled on November 6, leaving you additional time to participate in the interviews. The format of the interview itself is left to the individuals concerned but we recommend that you proceed for an oral (possibly recorded) interview, which is revisited a few days later in concentrated written form.
4. The interviews are due on November 13. The interviews' final form will consist of a 3-page document (not longer). We are not interested in a transcript of the oral interviews. We encourage you to proceed from an oral exchange; to revisit the exchange; to formulate new questions and answers in written form.
5. Ideally, each interview will encourage the respective participants to clarify additional research they would like to pursue. This can take the form of a bibliography, filmography, among others.
